monochrome flair

The marriage of black and white bestows this ordinary HDB flat unit with an aesthetically pleasing facelift lack and white have always been meant to be. Look-wise, they are worlds apart but when paired together, they create this captivating pattern that evokes interest. Aware of what this powerful duo can do, designer Zoe Wong from Sky Creation, went with the eye-catching monochromatic theme for this 4-room HDB dwelling. It was a hit with the homeowners as the young couple have a preference for darker hues.

Working her magic, Zoe affixed a lofty feature wall which spans upwards from the wall to the entire width of the ceiling. Clad in wallpaper, strips of dark tinted mirrors frame the outline of the feature wall. To provide the perfect contrast to this black beauty, she whitewashed the walls and decked the floors in pristine white homogeneous flooring. Adding a low-hanging laminate console to the monochromatic features, the result is a stylish space brimming with decadence.

Still keeping to a monochromatic scheme in the dining area, the walls here are painted a light grey shade though. This provides some visual interest in the sea of black and white elements. After adorning the other wall with a full-length tinted mirror, more stylish furnishings like a jet-black glass table, crystal pendant lights and a faceless clock add to the chic quotient. Not forgetting to keep the space functional as well, Zoe added display niches next to the grey wall so that homeowners have a place to showcase their best wares.

Another area that follows the monochromatic style is the kitchen. Shrouded in white overhead cabinets and black granite countertops, the sizzling combination infuses a sleek appeal into the cooking quarters. Completing the stylish equation are the black glass splashback and the cove lighting implanted beneath the overhead cabinets. Emitting a gentle glow, the cove lighting also counters the harsh look of the glossy splashback and brings a more cosy vibe to the otherwise cold-looking kitchen.

A gorgeous myriad of mosaic tiles in different tones of blue awaits one in the bathroom. Splashed across the vanity area and toilet wall, it marks each territory distinctively and acts as a focal point as well. The shower area however, is kept simple with homogeneous grey tiles on both the walls and floors.

Things are also kept simple and cosy in the master bedroom. Instead of dressing the wall with an over-the-top feature wall, Zoe painted the wall in a tint of warm grey. A stylish quilted headboard frames the rest of the wall with flair. On top, she affixed a false ceiling paired with cove lighting and this immediately injects a warm, cosy feel to the sleeping chamber. She also utilised downlights to provide proper illumination for the homeowners to engage in some light reading before bedtime.

In the super plush walk-in-wardrobe, sexy black is the order of the day. Zoe decked the floors with black homogeneous tiles. The walls however, are painted in a deep purple hue as too much black can make the space look flat and in worse cases, dingy-looking. Thankfully, all these were averted with Zoe's sharp sense in colour co-ordination. Rich, silk purple blinds seal the look of opulence while a glamorous chandelier brings a regal touch. Other than these luxurious touches, she also installed a sliding mirror to one of the open wardrobes. This brings greater convenience to the homeowners while they dress and also saves on floor space.

Zoe only took three months to transform this ordinary 4-bedroom flat into a stunning sanctuary. By incorporating the classic monochromatic theme, this timeless style is sure to keep this abode looking sharp and current in many years to come.
